It looks like the opportunities for recreational looting are over (at least for now), so I hope Thursday at 2 PM will be a good time for most people.

I hope everyone is doing well during this strange time. On top of the Wuhan virus panic and economic collapse, the protests plus riots remind me of the last period of infantile leftism / apocalyptic fervor--the late 'sixties and early 'seventies. I missed a lot of it because I was still in school in the rural West, but I think it's best captured in a couple Walker Percy novels, particularly Love in the Ruins from 1971.
